MARC SPLAVER
Director of Press Relations

To the Media:

Welcome to our second season at Capital Centre. We again hope to accommodate you as efficiently as possible. The following are some of the services we will provide and some of the things we ask of you.

We ask members of the working press to notify us at least 24 hours in advance (Friday noon for weekend games) of games you will be covering. If you do not have an NBA season pass or a Bullets' season pass, we will leave a pass at the press entrance and a seat will be reserved for you at the press table. Your pass will also admit you to the press room and the locker room (when it is opened by the coach).

The press entrance is located just south of the Capital quadrant. The press room is adjacent to the press entrance and opposite Portal 5 on the concourse level of the arena.

The press room will open 1 1/2 hours prior to the game and will close when the last reporter has finished filing.

For help in filing your stories, please make your own arrangements with Western Union or Capcom (Michael Trilling: 301--424-2044). Any other service you may desire will be admitted to the arena (with 24-hour notice) but those listed above were the most reliable last year.

We will provide you with the following information prior to and during the game:

Lineups. NBA standings and current schedule. Cumulative statistics for the Bullets and the opposition. Notes of both human and statistical interest. Bullets' game-by-game results, highlights and highs and lows. Running score and individual leaders for each quarter. Halftime and final box score.

All of the information will be dispensed as it is available and copies will be available in the press room following the game.

We will, of course, help with any problems that may arise. Either I or my assistant will be in the press room at all times after the game. If we can be of further assistance, please contact us.

Abe Pollin

Chairman of the Board
The Capital Centre
President
Washington Bullets

"He did it without public assistance, without begging for a subsidy at the public trough, without tapping the taxpayers' till in the phony interest of civic philanthropy . . . he's due a salute from the neighborhood for doing it the only way he has ever known to go about a project–first class."

– Morris Siegel (Washington Star-News)

Abe Pollin has built an apartment house named for each member of his immediate family. There's the Robert Towers, the James, the Irene ("the finest apartment building in Washington"), the Appolliné ("who ever heard of a building named the Abe?" he asks) and the Linda Pollin Memorial Housing project, for his daughter who died in heart surgery in 1963.

When he began the most ambitious project of his life, he decided, at the suggestion of his wife Irene, to name it after the capital of the United States. Thus was born the Capital Centre and, like the Irene, it may be the finest of its kind.

Pollin, who had purchased the Bullets in 1964 with Arnold Heft and Earl Foreman for a then-record $1.1 million, became sole owner in 1968. When it became obvious the team couldn't break even, much less make money in Baltimore, he was faced with a major decision. He could either sell the team or move it. There wasn't much choice really, the Bullets had become too important a part of their owner's life for him to sell.

So he decided to move the team to his adopted hometown of Washington. But the Nation's Capital, alas, had no arena. The proposed Eisenhower Convention Center downtown was a hope, but bureaucratic delays (construction has not yet begun) dimmed that hope.

Armed with a team, but no arena, Pollin took proper action. He decided to build his own arena. And he would do it in 15 months, a nearly impossible schedule. Everything would have to be perfect, especially the weather. So naturally Washington was plagued with the rainiest fall in its history. Even that didn't stop the plans.

Fifteen months after the groundbreaking (August 24, 1972) the Bullets and Seattle Supersonics played NBA basketball in the Capital Centre.

Robert is now 24, James is 16 and on December 2 the Capital Centre will be one-year-old.

Jerry Sachs

President
The Capital Centre
Executive Vice President
Washington Bullets

"It's impossible to imagine him ill at ease. He's not an arm-twister, but he's always known to be in subtle control of the situation."

– Kathleen Maxa (Washington Star-News)

"Subtle control" was an absolute necessity for Jerry Sachs during the past year.

As the nation's most modern arena rushed through a back-breaking 15-month construction schedule, problems, not unexpectedly, arose at almost every turn. Every crisis which presented itself to Abe Pollin also faced Jerry Sachs. Nearly every major administrative decision was made by Jerry Sachs.

In subtle control always, he did the job.

The success of Capital Centre was as satisfying to Sachs as to anyone else. He had struggled since 1970 to help the Bullets make it in Baltimore, his hometown. "But in spite of our competitive ball club we saw, year after year, that we couldn't make it go."

So the team moved to its arena in Landover, Md. and Sachs put a diversified sports and business background to work for Capital Centre.

He began his career in 1959 as an aide in the Baltimore Orioles' public relations office, at no salary. By 1962 he was the Orioles' P.R. Director.

He stayed through 1965 when the Milwaukee Braves became the Atlanta Braves and Sachs left to head their public relations, marketing and advertising programs. From there he moved to Coca-Cola and became Coordinator of Sports Activities. Then back home to the Bullets.

Sachs, his wife, the former Joyce Schaffer, and their children, Gene (12) and Barbara (9), live in Bethesda, Md.

Bob Ferry
General Manager

"Bob is, in my opinion, the best judge of player talent in the league. I usually ask Bob about a player that we are especially interested in. He always has a good opinion and I know he'll be honest with me." – Bill Bertka (New Orleans Jazz)

After 1½ years dividing his time between playing and scouting, Bob Ferry looked back in 1968 and saw the following:

Thirteen points in the first seven games of 1968-69, a dislocated thumb and the possibility of a permanent arthritic condition if he continued playing.

On the other side of the ledger he saw two players he was instrumental in drafting–Earl Monroe and Wes Unseld–both named Rookie of the Year. With the switch from Ferry to Unseld at center the Bullets went from last place to first place.

Armed with this data, Ferry decided to devote full time to coaching and scouting–and leave the center playing to Unseld.

It was upwards all the way for Unseld, Ferry and the Bullets. Ferry continued scouting and uncovering gems like Phil Chenier, Kevin Porter, Nick Weatherspoon and Fred Carter. In June of 1973, the team on its way to Washington, Ferry became General Manager. And things are still going upwards.

Ferry still splits his time between day-to-day administrative and promotional duties of general manager, and the player personnel operations, including scouting, that are still closest to his heart.

Even though a 30-year-old Bob Ferry couldn't outplay the talented rookie Wes Unseld, Ferry was a solid NBA player for 10 years. He came out of St. Louis University, the hometown hero and No. 1 draft choice of the then–St. Louis Hawks. At Cleveland High in St. Louis Ferry had scored more than 50 points nine times.

K. C. Jones
Coach

"The guy's got more class than . . . well, what's the difference. He's got class and he's got pride. He'll win in Washington. You bet he'll win." – Red Auerbach

K. C. Jones doesn't talk much. Only when he has something to say. Unlike most NBA coaches he rarely yells. Maybe, as Red Auerbach says, that's because he has class.

"Some coaches relate to the players on an emotional level," says former Bullet Archie Clark. "K. C. related on a professional level. Quiet, easy. I like that."

So do his teammates. "If K. C. pulls you out of a game," says Kevin Porter, "it's because you're not helping the team. You don't have to worry about him embarrassing you and you don't have to worry about being pulled for personal reasons. That's important to an athlete."

Jones' career paralleled that of a larger defensive genius, Bill Russell. athlete himself. A great one. Some still call him the greatest defensive guard ever to play the game.

Jones' career paralled that of a larger defensive genius, Bill Russell. They were teammates at the University of San Francisco and won 60 consecutive games, including two NCAA championships. They were teammates on the 1956 Olympic basketball team that won a gold medal. And they were roommates with the Boston Celtics for nine years. Eight times they won the NBA title.

And K. C.'s scoring had almost nothing to do with those championships, just as Russell's scoring was not important. Their defense most certainly was. Jones never averaged double figures in the NBA, but his name always comes up when the league's great guards are discussed.

K. C., it seems, has always done things the unconventional way. He became a great player without scoring and he's becoming an excellent coach without yelling.

"What I like about the pro game is that you have to deal with minds.

In college you have to teach. In the pros every player has the talent, but you have to teach them how to use their minds."

So K. C. Jones adapted to his first year as an NBA coach by listening more than talking; by taking suggestions as often as offering them. He's working towards a goal, the goal that Red Auerbach never doubted he would attain: winning.

And while he's reaching that goal he's becoming an important part of the Washington community. He and his wife, the former Beverly Taylor, reside in Columbia, Md. They have five children, Leslie Ann (13), K. C. III (11), Kelly Marie (10), Bryna Lynn (9) and Holly Louise (4).

Bernie Bickerstaff
Assistant Coach

"It is known on the team and in the media that talking to Bickerstaff is the same as talking to Jones." – Mark Asher (The Washington Post)

The youngest assistant coach in the NBA, Bernie Bickerstaff adds much more than youth to the Bullets' organization. He also lends enthusiasm, intelligence, geniality and, like K. C. Jones, a touch of class.

Jones discovered his youthful assistant when the former coached the San Diego Conquistadors of the ABA and Bickerstaff was coach at the University of San Diego.

When Jones packed his bags for the Nation's Capital, Bickerstaff was not far behind. He left a program he had nurtured into a 19-9 team in 1973 and which had the top eight players returning. Among his stars, the captain in fact, was Stanley Washington, former All-Metropolitan guard at D.C.'s Spingarn High School and the Bullets' No. 4 draft choice last year.

A native of Benham, Ky., Bickerstaff played at the University of San Diego and later turned down an offer to play for the Harlem Globetrotters to become assistant coach at his alma mater. He became head coach at 25 and assistant coach of the Bullets at 29.

Last summer he really began to earn a reputation throughout the Washington area, coaching the Bullets' team in the D.C. Summer Pro Basketball League, participating in the team's Summer Clinic program and speaking throughout the area.

Bickerstaff, his wife Eugenia, and their daughter, Cydni, live in Columbia, Md.

BILL FORD – Trainer

It is doubtful whether the Bullets could make a road trip without Bill Ford. The 45-year-old native of Baltimore tends to all the players' needs, from taping ankles to making hotel arrangements. Ford has proper background as a jack-of-all-trades. He served his alma mater, the University of Baltimore in a variety of positions and from 1964 through 1966 he worked as equipment manager and trainer for the Bullets. Ford now lives in Bowie, Md.

MARC SPLAVER – Director of Press Relations

At 26-years-old, Marc Splaver is the NBA's second youngest publicity director (to Milwaukee's John Steinmiller). A graduate of American University, with a degree in journalism, Splaver was AU's sports information director for three years after graduation. He formulated the successful All-American campaign for Kermit Washington, centered around the "American Revolution" theme and won an award for the best press guide in the East. A native of Bridgeport, Conn., Splaver lives in Silver Spring, Md.

TOM ROLLEFSON – Scout

The man who does most of the legwork in scouring the nation's colleges for future Bullets is Tom Rollefson. The 31-year-old native of Evanston, Ill. has been a "basketball nut" all his life. He played at Lake Forest College (Ill.) and was assistant coach at Hiram Scott (Neb.) and Delaware. He also coached the Continental League champions from Rockford, Illinois in 1971. Rollefson lives in Springfield, Va.

PHIL CHENIER

6-3 – 180 – Guard – No. 45

College: California '72
High School: Berkeley

Birthplace: Berkeley, Calif.
Birthdate: October 30, 1950

Residence: Columbia, Md.
Wife: Paula – Children: April (3), Phillip (1)

How Chenier Became a Bullet: Drafted on first round of "hardship" draft in 1971.

"Physically he is as good as any guard I have faced in this league. He is going to be fantastic." – Jerry West

"Phil is so good the game is almost beneath him. He's going to be one of the greatest ever to play the game." – K. C. Jones

Phil Chenier is no longer one of the most promising guards in basketball. That promise is now being fulfilled and, with the great years of Oscar Robertson and Jerry West behind them, Chenier stands right alongside Walt Frazier as the greatest guard in the world. At 23, he can only get better and that's got to be a scary thought to the rest of the NBA.

Style: Picture-perfect jump-shooter . . . gets great height on his jump, thus is almost impossible to stop . . . he can get a good shot from almost any place on the floor . . . very quick hands . . . great leaping ability . . . handles the ball well, but prefers to play the shooting guard position . . . the best shot-blocking guard in the NBA . . . excellent defender (Frazier had .472 field goal percentage on season, only .378 against Bullets).

Statistics: The Bullets' leading scorer (21.9) in only his third season in NBA . . . blocked more shots (67) than any guard in NBA; only seven forwards and 11 centers blocked more shots . . . was 8th in NBA in steals, yet committed only 135 personal fouls, fewer than any starting player except Oscar Robertson . . . 13th best scorer in NBA (only Goodrich and Petrie among the guards scored more) . . . 5th among guards in rebounds, with 100 more than the previous season . . . has

DICK GIBBS

6-5 – 210 – Forward – No. 21

College: Texas-El Paso '71
High School: Ames

Birthplace: Ames, Iowa
Birthdate: December 20, 1948

Residence: Maryland

How Gibbs Became a Bullet: Acquired from Seattle, with a third-round draft choice, for Archie Clark, Aug. 19, 1974.

"Dick can be a very good shooter and defensive player. He just needs to become more consistent. He can play forward or guard."
– Bill Russell

One of the newest Bullets, Gibbs adds more flexibility to K. C. Jones' plans . . . can play forward or guard . . . is more at home in the frontcourt, at small forward, but can help in the backcourt . . . is similar to new teammate Mike Riordan in that respect . . . started more than a dozen games for Seattle last year . . . played in the first game ever at Capital Centre, when the Sonics lost to the Bullets, 98-96 . . . last year was the first time he really had a chance to play in the NBA and he responded with a 10.8 scoring average, while his field goal percentage jumped to .431 . . . excellent free-throw shooter with career average of exactly 80 per cent . . . former coach Bill Russell liked his aggressiveness and shooting ability . . . is known as a streaky shooter, a problem he hopes to overcome with the Bullets. . . Bullets are his fourth team in as many years . . . was drafted by Chicago, but traded to Houston before he had played with the Bulls . . . later went to Kansas City-Omaha, Seattle, and now hopes he has found a home with the Bullets . . . was teammate of Bullets' star Elvin Hayes in rookie year at Houston . . . best game last year saw him score 30 points and grab 14 rebounds against Portland.

6-4 – 200 – Guard – No. 14

College: Western Kentucky '67
High School: Taylor Co. (Ky.)

Birthplace: Campbellsville, Ky.
Birthdate: August 11, 1944

Residence: Maryland

Wife: Yevette
Children: Hearie (13), Clemette (9), Lori (4), Brent (1)

How Haskins Became a Bullet: Acquired from Phoenix for Dave Stallworth and future considerations, Sept. 6, 1974.

"Clem is an excellent long-range shooter. When he comes off the bench, he's instant offense."
– Bob Ferry

Became a Bullet two weeks before opening of training camp . . . will provide experienced help at guard . . . at 6-4, 200 pounds, is a "big" guard . . . his most obvious strength is shooting ability . . . has great shooting range . . . 45 per cent career average is testament to his accuracy, because most of his shots come from way outside . . . 79 per cent free-throw shooter, but has hit 84 per cent over last three years . . . at 30-years-old he should be at his peak . . . was drafted on first round by Chicago in 1967, behind Detroit's Jimmy Walker and Bullets' Earl Monroe; Walt Frazier was fifth pick that season . . . averaged 8.9 as a rookie and hasn't dipped below double figures since . . . best year came in 1970 when he averaged 20.3 .

ELVIN HAYES

6-9 – 235 – Forward-Center – No.11

College: Houston '68
High School: Britton (La.)

Birthplace: Rayville, La.
Birthdate: November 17, 1945

Residence: Houston

Wife: Erna
Children: Elvin Jr. (7), Erna Jr. (2)

How Hayes Became a Bullet: Acquired from Houston for Jack Marin and future considerations, June 23, 1972.

"He gives us 48 minutes every night. He scores, he rebounds, he blocks shots and when it's all over he comes in the lockerroom and pats everyone else on the back." – K. C. Jones

"It's uncanny how he makes those shots at the end. Boy, it must be fun playing with a guy like that on your team." – Austin Carr

Style: "Devastating" may be the best word to describe Hayes . . . he did it all for the Bullets last year; excelled in every aspect of the game and virtually carried the rebounding load on his shoulders with Unseld's knee injury . . . probably the fastest man in the NBA from one end of the court to the other . . . the greatest rebounder in pro basketball . . . always came through in the clutch whether the Bullets needed a basket, a rebound or an opponent's shot blocked, Hayes was the man . . . born to play basketball: fast, smooth, strong, good hands, incredible timing.

Statistics: Only man besides Chamberlain or Russell to lead the NBA in rebounding over last 17 years . . . did it twice, in 1969 and 1974 . . . fourth leading rebounder of all-time with 16.3 average . . . seventh leading scorer of all-time with 25.4 average . . . tied with Chamberlain as leading percentage shooter in playoff history . . . only Chamberlain, Abdul-Jabbar and Robertson have scored 10,000 points quicker than Hayes . . . led NBA in minutes played last year for third time . . . only Chamberlain has led in that category more times . . . Hayes is second (also to Chamberlain) in all-time minutes played with 43.7 minutes per game.

TOM KOZELKO

6-8 – 220 – Forward-Center – No. 22

College: Toledo '73
High School: Central

Birthplace: Traverse City, Mich.
Birthdate: July 1, 1951

Residence: College Park, Md.

How Kozelko Became a Bullet: Drafted on third round in 1973.

"Tom Kozelko is going to be a fine player. He proved himself tonight."

– Elvin Hayes (after Kozelko scored 19 points in the seventh game of the playoffs against New York)

"I want him in there because of his defense. He really does a job in there."

– K. C. Jones

Style: A fundamentally solid player . . . does the right things at the right time . . . has ability to play both center and forward . . . will be a good passer . . . coachable . . . an excellent shooter in college and, with confidence, will be a pro shooter . . . shoots jumper and hook . . . persistent around backboards . . . already a fine defensive player.

Statistics: Most impressive statistics were saved for last: came off the bench in seventh game of Eastern Conference playoffs against the Knicks to hit all eight field goal attempts and finish with 19 points, his pro high . . . had 15 points and seven rebounds in 28 minutes during starting performance against Celtics on March 17.

Career: On Feb. 9, 1974 Kozelko joined Elvin Hayes, Mike Riordan, Phil Chenier and Kevin Porter in the starting lineup and the Bullets proceeded to win six of their next seven games. That and the 19-point playoff game against the Knicks were the highlights of his rookie year . . . No. 2 scorer in Toledo history, behind only Steve Mix and ahead of Larry Jones and John Brisker . . . collegiate averages of 20.8 points and 10.4 rebounds . . . two-time Mid-American Conference all-star.

KEVIN PORTER

5-11 – 175 – Guard – No. 10

College: St. Francis '72
High School: DuSable

Birthplace: Chicago, Ill.
Birthdate: April 17, 1950

Residence: Columbia, Md.

Wife: Cleota
Children: Kevin II (2)

How Porter Became a Bullet: Drafted on third round in 1972.

"I'm not the key to this ballclub. Kevin Porter is. He's the guy who makes us run. On every winning streak we've had Kevin has ignited our fastbreak. Somebody can always rebound. It's harder to replace a guy who can penetrate like Kevin can."
– Elvin Hayes

Style: Whirling wisp of a guard . . . intense and fierce competitor . . . aggressive on offense and defense . . . penetrates as well as any guard despite being one of the smallest players in NBA (only Calvin Murphy is as small) . . . makes up for lack of size with that fierce desire to play and beat his man . . . has ability to hang in air, drawing defenses to him, and either dumping off to open man or shooting tantalizingly soft layups . . . acrobatic player . . . when he learns to control his aggressiveness on defense, will become good defender because of hustle . . . better driver than outside shooter, but hits well enough to keep defenses honest . . . loves to run and lead the fastbreak.

Statistics: NBA's 10th leading playmaker, with 5.8 assists per game . . . 469 assists accumulated despite averaging only 29 minutes per game . . . Bullets' fourth leading scorer . . . Bullets' assist leader in 43 games . . . leading scorer 11 times . . . scored at least 20 points in 17 games . . . 319 personal fouls most in league . . . averaged 16.7 points and seven assists against Celtics.

Career: The most important year in Porter's career was last year when he joined the Bullets' starting lineup . . . as rookie he gave indications of his ability, but blossomed in 1973-74 with a year's experience refining his skills and enabling him to run the offense . . . never averaged below 23 points per game at St. Francis . . . scored more than 500 points all three varsity years in college . . . was named MVP in D.C. Summer Pro Basketball League for 35 points in semifinal and 38 in championship game.

MIKE RIORDAN

6-4 – 200 – Forward-Guard – No. 6

College: Providence '67
High School: Holy Cross

Birthplace: New York City
Birthdate: July 9, 1945

Residence: Gambrills, Md.

Wife: Mary
Children: LeAnne (5), Michelle (3), Brian (2)

How Riordan Became a Bullet: Acquired from New York, with Dave Stallworth, for Earl Monroe, Nov. 10, 1971.

"If Mike Riordan were paid by the hour he'd have the fattest wallet in the NBA."
– Steve Hershey (Washington Star-News)

"He hustles so damn much it's hard to find somebody to run with him all night."
– Bob Cousy

Style: Prototypical hustling small forward . . . plays the position like it was created just for him–good defense, shoots from anywhere, handles the ball like a guard (which he can be), can lead the fastbreak or crash the boards, depending on the situation . . . shoots long-range lefty jumper . . . drives with authority and is flexible enough to finish his drive with a strong layup or a finesse layup . . . outstanding fundamentalist on defense . . . can run all day.

Statistics: Bullets' third best scorer for second consecutive year . . . was team's leading scorer 13 times . . . joined Chenier and Hayes as only Bullets to surpass 30 points, with 33 against Golden State (Dec. 15) . . . scored at least 20 on 24 occasions . . . 102 steals second to Chenier . . . fourth in Bullets' all-time field goal percentage with .488, seventh in assists average with 3.8 . . . did not miss a free throw in February, converting 29 in a row.

Career: Drafted 12th by the Knicks in 1967 and that should indicate what the pro scouts thought of his basketball future. They were wrong . . . became well-known as the player called on to "give fouls" . . . when given the opportunity, he proved he belonged in the NBA . . . increased playing time made his worth even more obvious . . .

blossomed when obtained by the Bullets and in first complete season with them his scoring average swelled to 18.1 and he played more minutes than any forward in the NBA; also made second All-Defensive team.

WES UNSELD

6-7 – 245 – Center – No. 41

College: Louisville '68
High School: Seneca

Birthplace: Louisville, Ky.
Birthdate: March 14, 1946

Residence: Baltimore

Wife: Connie Marie
Children: Kimberly Marie (2)

How Unseld Became a Bullet: Drafted on first round in 1968.

"I was in Baltimore when Wes Unseld got there. It didn't take the players long to figure out that on top of being a great player, Wes is a great man. He turned the Bullets' whole attitude around by just being there." – Kevin Loughery

Style: Perhaps the strongest man in basketball . . . his outlet pass is the one to which all others are compared . . . great hands . . . a fantastic passer for a center . . . rarely makes a mistake . . . Cleveland Coach Bill Fitch says that Wes "can beat you with his head." . . . excels at all aspects of the game that don't show up in box scores: passing, setting massive picks, throwing outlet passes and leading by example . . . became a great rebounder by using his bulk to get position . . . very quick and strong hands.

Statistics: Statistically Wes' value can only be shown by his rebounding credentials . . . was second among NBA's rebounders first four years in league . . . his 16.1 career average is sixth on all-time list . . . excels in playoffs, when it really counts . . . even last year, his most frustrating because of nagging injuries, Wes came alive at playoff time and outplayed Dave DeBusschere in what was expected to be Knicks' best matchup . . . needs 17 rebounds to surpass Gus Johnson as Bullets' all-time boards leader.

Career: Joined Wilt Chamberlain as only players named Rookie of the Year and Most Valuable Player in same season . . . Bullets vaulted from last place in 1968 to first in 1969 with addition of three-time Louisville All-American . . . has always been respected by teammates and foes . . . a member of Kernan Children's Hospital Board of Directors.

NICK WEATHERSPOON

6-7 – 205 – Forward – No. 12

College: Illinois '73
High School: McKinley (Canton, Ohio)

Birthplace: Greenwood, Miss.
Birthdate: July 20, 1950

Residence: Columbia, Md.

How Weatherspoon Became a Bullet: Drafted on first round in 1973.

"He turned out even better than I expected. With my team he'd be a star and probably Rookie of the Year." – Gene Shue (Coach, Philadelphia 76ers)

"He's one of the greatest thin rebounders I've ever seen."
– Peter Carry (Sports Illustrated)

Style: Destined to be one of the NBA's best forwards . . . can play either power or small forward position . . . excellent jump shooter from within 18 feet . . . great leaping ability . . . very quick reactions to the ball . . . can really get the ball off the boards . . . needs work on his passing . . . played good defense for a rookie and can only get better in that department.

Statistics: Averaged 7.6 points and 6.1 rebounds per game despite playing only 1216 minutes, not a low figure for a rookie . . . had 18 rebounds against Milwaukee on Feb. 8 and 19 vs. Cleveland on Feb. 12 . . . high of 19 points in Dec. 22 victory over Houston.

Career: Named to All-Rookie team . . . players' poll placed him third behind Ernie DiGregorio and Ron Behagen among NBA rookies . . . all-time leading scorer at Illinois . . . averaged 20.9 points and 11.4 rebounds for career; 25.0 points per game in senior year . . . top vote-getter for Pizza Hut All-Star game in Las Vegas . . . fantastic high school career in Canton where he is still a legend . . . a scholastic All-American and MVP for United States All-Stars in Dapper Dan Roundball Classic in Pittsburgh.

DENNIS DUVAL

6-3 – 180 – Guard – No. 23

College: Syracuse '74
High School: Westbury

Birthplace: Westbury, N.Y.
Birthdate: March 31, 1952

Residence: Upper Marlboro, Md.

How DuVal Became a Bullet: Drafted on second round in 1974.

"Dennis may be even better suited to the pro game than college ball, because he can pull up and shoot the jumper. . . . He's smart, knowledgeable enough to make the adjustment quickly." – Roy Danforth (Coach, Syracuse)

Second-leading all-time scorer at Syracuse–and it's no disgrace to rank behind only Dave Bing . . . wore Bing's number: 22, but Tom Kozelko owns that on the Bullets, DuVal will wear 23 . . . has the raw ability to be either the playmaking or shooting guard . . . has excellent dribbling ability, with a tendency to be too fancy, but as former Coach Danforth says, he's "knowledgeable enough to make the adjustment" . . . excellent straight-up shooter . . . an All-American and Academic All-American . . . nickname "Sweet D" . . . considered by many the best guard in the country prior to his senior season . . . smooth.

LEONARD ROBINSON

6-7 – 225 – Forward – No. 33

College: Tennessee State '74
High School: Raines

Birthplace: Jacksonville, Fla.
Birthdate: October 4, 1951

Residence: Upper Marlboro, Md.
Wife: Barbara

How Robinson Became a Bullet: Drafted on second round in 1974.

"Len is undoubtedly the finest forward ever to play for Tennessee State. We're going to miss Len as a ballplayer, but we're also going to miss him as a man. He was our leader." – Ed Martin (Coach, Tennessee State)

Big, strong forward who can also play center in certain situations . . . Bullets' General Manager Bob Ferry scouted him for three years at Tennessee State and was surprised he was not chosen in the first round . . . when he was still available, the Bullets grabbed him . . . was 22nd player chosen in draft . . . Ferry was impressed not only by his size, but by his shooting and his speed . . . averaged 24.4 points during his senior year on a .543 shooting percentage . . . also grabbed 17.1 rebounds per game . . . played on United States team that toured Soviet Union during the summer and was its leading scorer and rebounder . . . first-team All-American selection by Associated Press, United Press International and NCAA Coaches.

STANLEY WASHINGTON

6-4 – 190 – Guard – No. 20

College: University of San Diego '74
High School: Spingarn

Birthplace: Washington, D.C.
Birthdate: January 23, 1952

Residence: Washington, D.C.

How Washington Became a Bullet: Drafted on fourth round, 1974.

"Stan is a solid, all-around player. He can shoot, handle the ball and play defense. He was a great player at San Diego." – Bernie Bickerstaff Home-grown talent . . . has a tradition to uphold: Elgin Baylor, Dave Bing and John Tresvant all attended Spingarn . . . first-team All-Metropolitan at Spingarn . . . met Bullets' assistant coach Bernie Bickerstaff when he decided to attend U. of San Diego, where Bickerstaff was coaching . . . Washington served as Toreros' captain two years . . . good long-range shooter . . . good rebounder for guard . . . played for Bullets' championship team in D.C. Summer Pro League and had big championship game: 20 points, 10 rebounds . . . effective passer . . . still learning defensively . . . set school assist record with 171 during junior year.

THE BULLETS AND THEIR FAMILIES

Elvin Hayes (left) and daughter Erna Jr. arrive for a Bullets' welcome luncheon in Prince George's County. Valentine's Day was another special day for Bullets' families, including: the K. C. Jones family (above) with the coach's wife Bev flanked by K. C. III, Bryna Lynn, Holly Louise, Leslie Ann and Kelly Marie; General Manager Bob Ferry (below) with LeAnne and Michelle Riordan; Connie Unseld (bottom left) with daughter Kim.

R_X FOR A CHILD

One of the best prescriptions you can give a hospitalized child is love. At Children's Hospital, the Child Life Department tries to ease the fears and anxieties of the patient and his family through this pre-admission puppet show. With this show as well as activities on the care units, the Child Life Department helps bridge the gap between the home and hospital, between things that are familiar and things that are unfamiliar . . . thereby reducing the emotional stress of hospitalization.

TWO WAYS TO SAVE AND INVEST

Now, there are two smart ways to save and invest your money in Washington. And they're both available at Chevy Chase Savings and Loan.

The smart way to save your money is with the 6% Passbook, a regular savings account that requires no minimum deposit, so you can start your account with as little or as much money as you wish. It involves no time restrictions, so your money is available to you whenever you want it. And your money begins earning at the current rate of 6% per year from the very first day of deposit.

The smart way to invest your money is through a High-Yield Certificate Plan, a financially sound program that allows you to invest a predetermined amount of money for flexible periods of time.

Maybe it's time you learned about the better way to save . . . and invest . . . your money.

DECEMBER 2, 1973
OPENING NIGHT

The wait was over on December 2, 1973. Capital Centre's founder, Abe Pollin, welcomed NBA Commissioner Walter Kennedy (left) and Maryland Governor Marvin Mandel. Seattle's Bud Stallworth scored the first basket, but Elvin Hayes' 36 points and 29 rebounds – along with these two blocked shots in the final five seconds – preserved a 98-96 Bullets' victory.

During his NBA career in which he scored more than 5,000 points, he was known as a strong outside shooter for a big man, and enjoyed notable success in matchups against Wilt Chamberlain when he would journey away from the basket and make Chamberlain come outside to defend against his long jumper.

Ferry and his wife, the former Rita Brooks, live in Bowie, Md. with their children, Laura (13), Bobby (11) and Danny (8). The Ferrys have a dog named Bullets and a cat named Largo.

BULLETS ON THE AIR

WWDC – 1260 AM-101 FM

TONY ROBERTS earned the title "Voice of the Bullets" last year by covering more than 50,000 miles during the team's 82 regular-season and seven playoff games. He also narrated the Bullets' highlight film and will host the live postgame show on Telscreen following each home game this year.

JOHNNY HOLLIDAY, WWDC's morning personality, has become a D.C.-area personality of the first magnitude. He and Bullets' owner Abe Pollin were named "Washingtonians of the Year" by Washingtonian magazine. Holliday's honor was earned for his considerable charity work, along with his popular radio show.

WTOP-TV – Channel 9

Washington's most popular sports telecaster, as judged by the ratings and votes of his peers, WARNER WOLF will head WTOP's broadcasts of 26 Bullets' away games this year. Wolf's sportscasts, featuring the "Boo of the Week", have become a household habit in the Washington area.

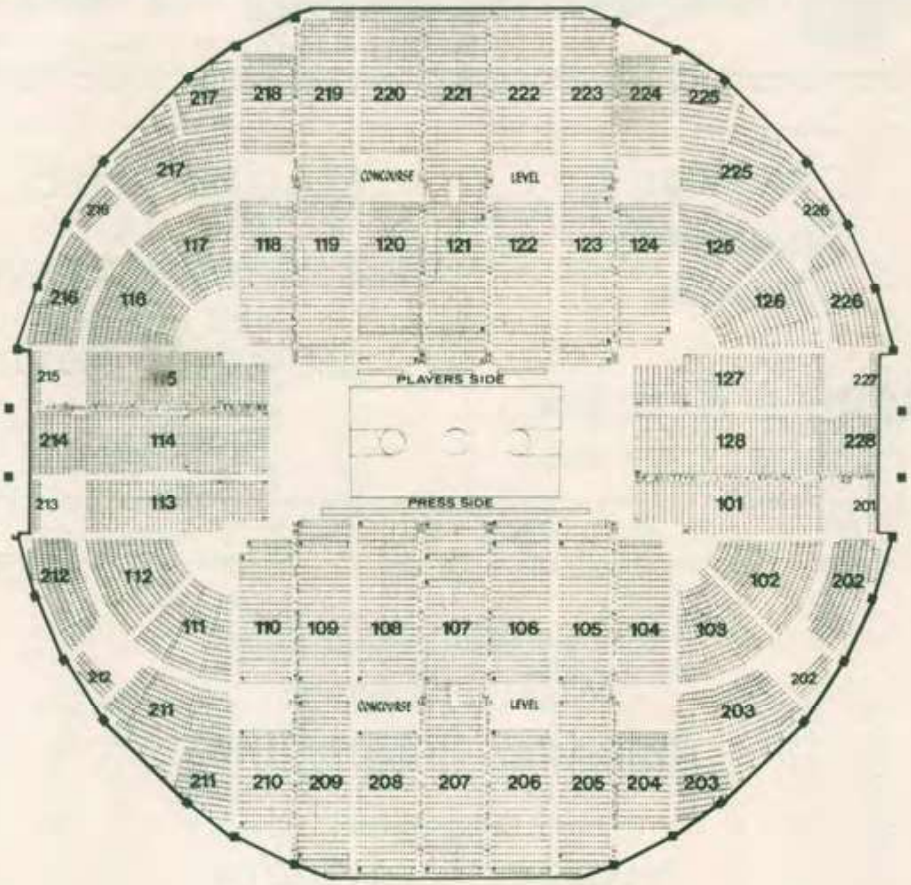
CAPITAL TICKET CENTRE

Capital Centre has its own unique ticket system, known as the Capital Ticket Centre. Tickets purchased at any of 15 Hecht Co. department stores, the downtown Ticket Centre at 16th & K Sts., N.W., the Pentagon Ticket Service and any Capital Centre ticket window will draw from a pool of every unsold seat in the arena.

Those who want to be certain of having good seats for every game and be guaranteed the opportunity to purchase playoff tickets may apply for season tickets (350-1500). Partial plans are also available. Individual tickets for regular-season games are $7, $5 and $3.



WTOP-TV9 Washington is pro sports.

Bullets Basketball. Capitals Ice Hockey. Redskins and NFL Football. This fall we're giving the Washington area what it wants. Pro sports. With the most professional, complete, authoritative coverage.
